

Best in class for Nov. 14

Students from Cobb and Paulding County middle schools are finalists of the fourth annual visual arts contest, waterSmart waterArt. A panel of local artists and conservationists judged artwork that merged artistic talent and a passion for water conservation. Out of the 180 students that submitted work, the panel picked twelve finalists. Joanna Frazier, eight grade student from Lovinggood Middle School in Cobb County, received the highest score for her submission of art that portrayed water conservation in daily activities. All 12 finalists will be features in the 2014*waterSmart waterArt* calendar. The submissions are currently on display this month at The Art Station-Big Shanty, where there will be a reception on Nov. 14.
